Sudden fines anger industries in West Sac, lead to talks

■ Negotiations now underway between angered businesses and city officials

By Steve Marschke

A sudden clampdown several weeks ago by the West Sacramento public works department against local sewage discharges left representatives of about 60 local businesses furious. The businesspeople have begun talks -- sponsored by the local Chamber of Commerce -- with the West Sacramento City Manager's Office to try to negotiate a solution to the problem.

The trouble started when the public works department re-

New superintendent takes seat at first board meeting

■ Group of students walks out of River City High School to protest various regulations

by John Siden

At a quick and otherwise uneventful meeting of the board of education Thursday, district trustees added funds to school budgets, heard newly-appointed superintendent Dr. David Miller report a student walkout at River City High School the previous week and discussed a proposed settlement with the teacher's bargaining unit in closed session.

It was Miller's first meeting with the trustees since assuming his duties March 23, although he has been in the audience at the two previous meetings.

The funds approved by the trustees added about $28,000 to the spending ability of the school sites to buy, repair, or replace equipment. The money was reduced in the 1993-94 budget in an effort to avert an anticipated shortfall, which never developed.

The walkout of 40-50 students at the high school campus was due to proposed changes of rules for spirit week, according to principal Steve Vaczovsky, who said after the meeting that "wild rumors" had been circulating among students about a number of changes being discussed at the school. More than a hundred students stayed away from third period classes on Thursday, March 17.

Vaczovsky said most students returned to class campus officials talked to a dozen or so leaders, but some students who left the campus had to be rounded up and assigned to the Saturday school detention program.

Some of the students were reportedly protesting a change in dress codes (which in actuality will not be up for discussion for several months). Others were angry about the school's decision to ban public displays of affection such as kissing, and some merely took the opportunity to skip class.

Trustees spent more time in closed session discussing terms of a proposed settlement with the teacher's union than they did in open session. The union has already ratified the agreement, which replaces the agreement that expired at the end of December, and trustees will vote on it after costs have been analyzed by district staff.

Terms of the three-year agreement are said to include a 3% salary increase, retroactive to July 1, 1993, and an early retirement incentive. In addition, the district will pick up the increases in health insurance premiums.

Lunch for two -- or dinner for 500

by Elizabeth Abess

Can you imagine entering what appears to be a small food operation, known for its take-out food and delicatessen, and saying "I'd like a dinner for 500 please?" That's just one example of what you could order from Freddie's Gourmet.

Freddie's Gourmet was founded in 1969, and was purchased by Bob and Gloria Dunham three years ago. According to Bob, Freddie's is "an off the beaten path, high quality delicatessen, and we've also developed a catering business out of it. We call it a custom catering concept." What's that, you ask? Instead of printing set menus and hoping they meet people's needs, they like to sit down with people and determine what their budgets are, their goals are, and what they're trying to accomplish at their catered event. And then they put together a complete catering package.

And all their food is homemade! Never mind ordering dinner for 500. You can go in to Freddie's and order a hot, homemade dinner for yourself or your family and not have to do any dishes! They have everything from hot and cold sandwiches to tacos, and pastas, rice, beans, salads and garlic bread in between.

Not to mention their all-important rotisserie. Their specialty is what Bob calls their "World famous fresh roasted chicken sandwich." And don't forget their BBQ pork ribs or BBQ pork sandwich (the met is roasted daily). About the rotisserie, Bob says, "Our chicken sandwiches and chicken tacos are real unique because we use a roasting method, so first the fat drips off, and then we strip them of the skin and use that meat. Most people will boil their chicken and then add spices."

At Freddie's they prepare a lot of lunches and dinners and do about ten to fifteen catering jobs per month. In fact, currently their sales are about sixty percent from the deli side of the business and forty percent from catering. They do catering not only in West Sacramento, but they get requests from the Sacramento area, too. They have a lot of corporate accounts that will use their services regularly for business lunches, etc. But, of course, they also cater weddings, anniversaries, memorials, retirements, and pretty much any type of function where food is served.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

By:
Elizabeth S. Abess

In addition, Bob and Gloria are very supportive of the community of West Sacramento. Since they took over Freddie's they've sponsored a little league team, the Royals, every year. They've donated their services in other ways, too, including involvement in the Golden State Shuttle Program, and the jazz festival (where they won the Critics Choice award at the Cajun cookoff).

Their backgrounds (at least Bob's) may surprise you. Gloria was the food service director for The Bee for the twelve years prior to purchasing Freddie's. Bob, however, was in investment banking. That seems like quite a leap, but apparently it was a good jump, because Freddie's is doing very well and he and Gloria seem to be thoroughly enjoying themselves. Just think, they never have to do any dishes if they don't want to...at home anyway!

Freddie's Gourmet is located at 120-C 15th Street in West Sacramento and is open Monday through Saturday. The phone number is 371-8945.

No one predicted or prevented 14-year old's death

■ 14-year old West Sacramento girl became truant, slipped through the cracks of 'the system', and ended up dead of a drug overdose and stuffed in a trash can along the West Sacramento riverfront. She was identified only after a nationwide search for her identity which ended this month

By David Weller

City police have arrested Jennifer Osborn's mother and stepfather many times. If there had been any indication that Jennifer's mother, Diana Lyons, had legal custody of a daughter, then at some point the courts might have required Yolo County's Child Protective Services to take custody and send the girl to a foster home.

It is more likely, however, that since the household did not appear to be violent, and since the Lyons were routinely arrested for petty crimes, the courts would never have taken Jennifer away, even though her mother is known to be a heroine addict.

"Most often the kids go right back to the parents. There are very few foster homes available," said Helena Helmold of the East Yolo Center for Drug and Alcohol Abuse.

But before the Child Protective Services even has the chance to intervene, the legal system has to be aware there is a child in danger. When police make an arrest at a household with children, they report to the court on the living conditions and the degree of apparent danger to the children. Jennifer's living conditions were never reported because there was never any indication that a child was living in the Lyon's apartment.

"It was quite surprising when I found out that Jennifer was Diana's daughter. I don't think anybody in the department knew Diana had a daughter," said Detective Tom Bowler, who by his own account has "had many dealings" with both Diana and Mitch Osborn.

Apparently 13 year old Jennifer was not living at home when she died of an overdose of crank. Her body lay in the county morgue for almost a month before being identified. She was initially identified by an inmate at Yolo County Jail after a computer enhanced picture appeared on television. The inmate claimed to have a photograph of Jennifer in her wallet, but the identity of the inmate's picture is not clear.

The following day Jennifer's aunt, Patti Zachary, appeared at the police station with better photographs, including some showing Jennifer wearing the same jewelry that was found on her body. At that point, "there was no doubt" that the dead girl was Jennifer, according to Bowler.

Bowler reports no big breaks in his investigation into the events surrounding Jennifer's death, but there are many tips coming into the department every day.

"If I believed everyone who called, then she would have been in several different locations with many different people on the day she died," said Bowler. Police are investigating all tips, however.

Jennifer lived from October of 1992 until July of 1993 with her Aunt Patti Zachary in Oakley California. When Jennifer decided to return to West Sacramento, Zachary warned her Contra Costa County social worker that the girl was going into a dangerous environment, but the social worker showed no concern.

Zachary remembers her niece as a very troubled young girl who needed to be liked. "She wanted to be loved so much. Anybody who gave her any affection, she would cling to. Every-

Motel issue agendized

Demands by the West Sacramento Motel & Hotel Association that local hotels receive a rebate on a portion of the taxes they collect -- to be used for marketing the local industry -- have been referred to the city economic development advisory commission (EDAC) for a recommendation.

EDAC is scheduled to take a look at the issue at its April 21 meeting.

Correction on Homer's

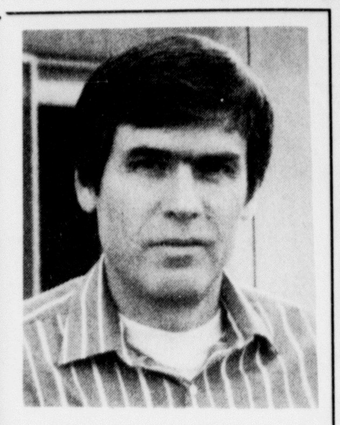

A news article last week contained some incorrect information about Homer's Florist and Gifts in West Sacramento.

Homer's Florist and Gifts was originally founded as a nursery, but shortly thereafter Homer turned it into a florist. It's format was not changed by the Athena Troyanos when she purchased it in 1985.

The News-Ledger regrets the error.

The dating scene: perils, pitfalls and assorted challenges

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

Recently, my daughter and her long-time boyfriend broke up and she has started dating again. The other night, after returning from dinner with a nice young man she had met in one of her college classes, she strolled over to the chesterfield (why did they ever start calling them couches?) where I was reading an interesting book on why most of our best American writers have been drunks. She plopped down beside me and asked, "Dad, was dating this stressful back in the old days?"

"Well," I said, trying to recall what going out on a date was like back around the turn of the century, "if I remember right, it was never as much fun as it was cracked up to be. Why? Didn't you have a good time?"

"Oh, sure, it was great, but it's so nerve-wracking talking to someone for the first time."

"But I thought you said you and Mark talk all the time in class."

"We do, but this was different."

"How so?"

She looked over at me as she often does when she's pretty sure I don't have a clue and said, "Oh, that's okay, Dad, I think I'll go talk to Mom about it. You probably wouldn't understand — it's girl stuff."

As my daughter took off in search of her mother, I sat back in my davenport (in case you don't want to call you couch a chesterfield) and was suddenly flooded with ancient memories of some of the pressures and tensions that went hand-in-hand with dating.

First, there was the terror of actually asking the girl out (and why was it that back in the 60's and 70's, the guy ALWAYS had to ask the girl out? And why did that all suddenly change about a week or so after I got married?).

Second, back when I was a teenager, a guy had to worry about the answers to some of the following questions: What is she says no? What if all my friends find out that she said no? Worse yet, what if she says yes? Will Dad let me use the good car? Will he give me some money so I'll be able to put some gas in the good car? Where do I take her if she says yes? Will she want to go to a movie? If she does, will I be able to talk her into going to the drive-in (where it only cost $1.50 a carload) or will she insist on going downtown to the Fox or the Crest? What kind of movies does she like? Will I get stuck going to one of those romantic ones? Will she want to go somewhere less boring than a movie? Where will I get the money to take her somewhere less boring than a movie? Will she want to go to dinner — please, Lord, not dinner! And if I do have to take her to dinner, will she notice that I sometimes make strange noises when I chew — even when my mouth is closed? Will something green or black (it was always one of those two colors) get stuck between my teeth? Will she wait until dessert to inform me that she has an extremely jealous former boyfriend who wants to be a Mafia hit man once he graduates from high school? Will her mother and sisters be looking out the windows when I walk her up to the front door? Should I kiss her goodnight? How will I know if she wants me to kiss her goodnight? If we do get close enough to kiss goodnight, will she notice that I only have one long eyebrow, instead of the two normal ones that most guys have?

Plus, there was always the unexpected — like the chilly fall night in 1967 when I was motoring along towards the old Alhambra theater with a young lady I had been trying to get to go out with me for over a year. She was everything I had ever wanted in a girl — pretty, funny, and liked by everyone. We were both a little nervous and we hadn't said a word to each other for some time when — with absolutely no warning — she (although she still tells people it was me) — well, she cut the cheese.

With the radio not working (Dad had made me take my own car) and the windows rolled up tight, it sounded like a bomb had gone off. Did we even look at each other? Nope. Did we in any way acknowledge what had happened? No way. Did I have the courage to crack the window and let in a little fresh air? Absolutely not! Instead, we both just looked straight ahead, tried not to take any deep breaths for a few minutes, and pretended that absolutely nothing had happened.

When it comes to dating, I think Jerry Seinfeld had it right when he said, "What is a date really, but a job interview that lasts all night? And the only difference between the two is that there aren't many job interviews where there's a chance you might end up naked at the end of it."

Men, women show different involvement in alcoholism

by Greg Wade and Sandy Holman
Yolo County Department of Alcohol and Drug Programs

April is alcohol awareness month. As a result, we have some interesting information about alcohol and women taken from Alcohol Alert, a publication of the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

Most of our knowledge of alcoholism comes from male subjects. However, newer studies indicate that there is a difference between male and female drinkers. Out of a total of 15.1 million alcohol-dependent individuals in the United States, 4.6 million are women. As a whole, women users tend to drink less and have fewer alcohol-related problems. However, women who are among the heaviest drinkers, equal or surpass men in terms of problems related to alcohol.

When women drink they become intoxicated by smaller quantities of alcohol that men require. This is because of the different physiologies of the two sexes. It is the female physiology, which combined with chronic alcohol abuse, creates a death rate of 50 to 100 percent higher than that of male alcoholics. In addition to the normal physical pitfalls of alcohol abuse, women have to worry about increased risk of breast cancer, menstrual disorders, and higher surceptibility to liver damage.

Drinking behavior seems to differ with the age, life role, and marital status of women. In general, a woman's drinking resembles that of her husband, siblings, or close friends. Whereas younger women (18-34) report higher rates of drinking-related problems that do older women, the incidence of alcohol dependence is greater among middle aged women (35-49).

Interestingly, research seems to indicate women who have multiple roles (e.g. married women who work outside the home/mothers) may have lower rates of alcohol problems that women who do not have multiple roles. Research also indicates that married women have less problems than women who are not married, divorced, or widowed. Furthermore, marriage or a marriage-like relationship seems to also lessen the effect of an inherited liability for drinking.

Although research does not tell us why this was the case, it makes a strong argument for women to lead full, productive and varied lives. This does not mean that women have to be superhuman, just that they need to do things that make them feel valued.

Women comprise 25% of clients in traditional treatment centers, but this number may be a poor indication of how many women suffer from alcoholism. Women drinkers who seek help frequently pursue avenues other than traditional alcoholism programs, such as psychiatric services or personal physicians, for treatment. In addition, fewer women than men reach treatment through the criminal justice system or through employee assistance programs.

So, as we do our outreach work in the community, it is important to make a special effort to connect with women who may be suffering in silence, or who may be avoiding treatment because of lack of childcare. Lack of childcare is one of the most frequently reported barriers to treatment of alcoholic women.

More research needs to be done about the effects of alcoholism on women, and the best way to treat this malady. With regard to treatment, many questions remain to be answered, including whether specialized treatment in a women-only program is more effective than treatment in a mixed gender setting. Previous concerns about a lack of women as research subjects in alcohol studies are beginning to be addressed. Hence, more answers regarding women and alcohol use and abuse will be forthcoming. We personally look forward to exploring ways to help women who are in need of assistance.

If you are a women who is experiencing a problem with alcohol, call the Department of Alcohol and Drug Programs at 666-8650 or come by and visit our office in Woodland at 201 W. Beamer Street.

Annual Founders Day festival is slated for June 5

By Liz Brady

It's time to break out the red-white-and blue streamers, figure out how to dress up the old red wagon into a parade float, and get ready to march from Golden State School to the picnic grounds at Bryte Park. Sunday, June 5, the 7th annual celebration of the founding of West Sacramento will kick off at noon and fun and games will be the order of the day.

The planning committee has some surprises for this year, which chairman Jim Gifford promises will "be loads of fun." He, and Juanita Lopez from the East Yolo Seniors; Steve Roberts from the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce; Carol Hawkins from the art guild; Dorothy Adamo from the Democratic Club; Joyce Miller from the ElderCare Pals of West Sacramento; and Liz Brady from the Society for Creative Anachronism are looking for others to joing them in "making it happen" for this popular civic event. "We are especially interested in hearing from people in the various ethnic communities in West Sacramento, from performances troupes, athletic teams and youth groups," Gifford said. "This is a citywide event, and we want to make sure it shows our citywide diversity."

Booths are available for fundraisers and information stations for non-profit groups including churches, community organizations and political office-seekers. Registration packets are available; call the Chamber of Commerce for information at 371-7042.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The NCAA Tournament is down to the Final Four. On Saturday, April 2 at 2:40 p.m., the Florida Gators will play Duke -- the team that has been to the national semifinals seven times in the last nine years -- and Arkansas, the number-one ranked team in the nation, will play Arizona.

The Duke Blue Devils, who are favored by six points, will be playing in their own backyard. Duke has too much tournament experience and should win a close ballgame. The Arizona Wildcats are going to have to play a wide-open game to beat the big boys from Arkansas. The Razorbacks are real tough under the boards and are favored by three points.

This is going to be the game to watch! I pick Arizona to win in overtime and the winner of this game will be the 1994 NCAA Tournament Champion!

The Giants and A's will tangle this weekend in the Bay Bridge Series. The Giants and A's made some final cuts to their opening day rosters. The Giants sent rookie first baseman J.R. Phillips to Triple-A Phoenix and put veteran Bud Black on the 15-day disable list.

Rich Monteleone won the final bullpen job and John Patterson and Steve Scarsone earned the earned the final two utility infield jobs. The A's sent Eric Fox to Tacoma and cut 42-year old pitcher Goose Gossage.

Scott Brosius will start at third base and Stan Javier will play center field.

The A's said Ricky Henderson might play some center field and Geronimo Berroa probably will rotate in left with Mike Aldrete. The Giants home opener is April 4 against the Pirates and the A's open against the Blue Jays on April 11.

The 49ers signed 34-years old ex-Chargers linebacker Gary Plummer for $1.7 million and released Keith DeLong. Rumors in the NFL have the Redskins interested in 49ers QB Steve Bono and fullback Tom Rathman. The best news in the NFL is the battle of egos in Dallas!

I love hearing about coach Jimmy Johnson and club owner Jerry Jones fighting. Last week, Jones discussed firing Johnson during a late-evening conversation over drinks. Johnson said he was infuriated that the Cowboys owner went so far as to mention former University of Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer as a possible successor. The Fox network is ready to offer Johnson a job broadcasting NFL games.

Coach Johnson is probably the best in the business, but if he quits, I know many 49er fans will be very happy!!

See you next week!!

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

The best ruling body covers all points of view

The recent public criticism of a member of the city's housing commission missed the point.

A community activist took the commission member to task for being an officer in the Southport Homeowners Association while at the same time serving as one of the citizens' representatives on the city housing commission, which at that time was dealing with a controversial housing project far from Southport.

This presents a "conflict of interest," said the activist. The commissioner was "biased."

Well, everyone is biased, and the possession of a strong opinion should not serve to prevent someone from serving on either an elected government body or an appointed one.

The best cure for 'bad' speech is more speech.

Instead, as the saying goes, the best cure for bad speech is more speech: the best way to create a board such as the housing commission is to choose people to represent all major points of view. There should be members strongly concerned with Southport, as well as with Broderick and Bryte and the rest of West Sacramento. No view should dominate, and all major views should receive a voice.

Together, their cumulative voice may be a fair one. A search for commission members who have no "bias" would be fruitless, and would leave many important viewpoints unrepresented. And that's far worse than representing too many viewpoints.

Save your stamps, folks:

During the past few weeks, the News-Ledger (and presumably hundreds of other newspapers across the nation) has received dozens of postcards from members of a seniors' group taking a stand on the national health care issue.

The cards were printed by the seniors' group itself, with a pre-printed political message in the form of a letter to the editor. All the seniors had to do was add a stamp and their signature, and drop their cards in the mail.

But such an approach -- from whatever political group -- doesn't deserve the same consideration as an old-fashioned letter to the editor, penned and signed by someone concerned enough to take the time to do it.

So you won't see their message here.

West Sac decimated

Sooner or later the decimation of downtown West Sacramento will reverse.

Sadly, when I returned from a two-week trip last January I found my favorite restaurant (Cap'n Don's) had closed and Sprouse Reitz was having a going out of business sale. The loss of Sprouse's was a double whammy since last year it was chosen as the chains only Sacramento area store.

Perhaps those who want to give tax breaks to would-be regional renters could give some breaks to potential downtown businesses too!

People becoming animals

After several years of spending and no income, people become like animals, they do what they have to in order to survive — KILL, RAPE, ROB.

Some leaders ascribe to the slogan, "Three strikes and you are out," and that is grossly unfair.

If everybody who wants a job could get it, this simple theory would end most crimes.

We are still working an 8-hour day, the same as in the 1930's and 40's.

High tech labor-saving devices now doing the work, replacing millions of men and women in the workplace.

How about getting hip to the times and cut the workday to 5 hours, which would save our economy, health, tranquility, and peace of mind.

Rapist's parole

After some research into the parole of Melvin Carter to Modoc County, I urge all California residents to get accurately informed and keep focused on the right issues instead of blaming our present government officials.

Melvin Carter was sentenced in 1982 under the determinate sentence which means his parole is automatic and there is no way to deny him time off for work credits which requires he only serve 12 of the 25 year sentence. He did not have to be reviewed by the parole board and the governor could not deny him parole or any of his constitutional rights. I do not blame Governor Wilson for the "criminal time bomb" that was created in the 1980's by these laws. The time bomb is that there are 265 more felons that have to be paroled this year and more in years to come. Carter is only the tip of the iceberg. The only choice communities face with the parole of these felons in various counties in the future is to join together and deny them services so they themselves will ask to be removed. If they are rejected everywhere then the governor can place them around existing penal institutions such as was done in the Larry Singleton case. He is placed in a modular unit near San Quentin.

I think we should have two main focuses. First to let Melvin Carter and other felons know we don't want them in our communities so they will ask to be removed. Second to inform our government officials of the legislative and judicial changes we want to take place now in regard to crime especially violent offenders. One strike you're dead sounds better to me for any criminal that uses a weapon and threatens our life.

K-8 programs

At the March 24 school board meeting the science committee presented their recommendations for the adoption of new instructional materials for grades K-8. Their proposal was the culmination of four years of hard work to develop a new curriculum for the instruction of science in WUSD schools.

The committee followed the recommendations of the California Science Framework to develop curriculum guidelines for the instruction of science. The state framework recommends instruction which focuses on thinking skills and major concepts rather than memorization of facts. In this era of rapid change in information and technology, it is imperative that we enable children to develop strong thinking and questioning skills rather than memorize facts which may already by outdated.

I was impressed with the fine job which the committee did in developing curriculum guidelines and coordinating available instructional materials with the proposed district goals in science. It was evident from their written and oral presentations that these dedicated WUSD personnel have spent a great deal of time and effort to provide the district with an outstanding science curriculum. I teach in a school district that has been without adequate curriculum guidance and support for the last two years. Thus, it was also evident to me that this committee would have had a very difficult time accomplishing their goal in such an impressive manner without the guidance and support of an administrative staff. The position of assistant superintendent of curriculum was recently vacated by Mr. Charles Matus in the wake of the major changes in the WUSD administration. I hope the new superintendent and the school board will be able to hire a new assistant superintendent of curriculum who can carry on the fine work of Mr. Matus.

Downtown Sac

Rather than have the state tear down so many of those nice apartments on 4 square blocks (5th-7th/N-P Streets) so as to make way for 1 square block (of it) for relocation of Department of Health Services (from 714-744 P Street), why not relocate DOHS to Lot A, the parking block, 7th and Capitol Mall? The twin towers at 714-744 P Street covers maybe half of that block, so a totally covered block could equal twice DOHS' present space. (Ironically, back in 1978, DOHS was split into several smaller departments with Department of Corrections and Department of the Youth Authority moving from 714 P Street to then make way for a then-down-sized/consolidated DOHS...history repeats itself, eh?)

So while those apartments (Capitol Towers') may not be up to the Americans with Disabilities Act standards, they would seem to rate about an 8 on a scale of 1 to 10...and what about the land and the cost of building replacement housing for same?

In this era of modern technology, is physical proximity really that important (so as to warrant destruction/rebuilding of so many decent apartments close to the workplace)?

With downtown Sacramento so hard-pressed for adequate land for the various state dept'l hdqtr. offices, it is time to build some of those new office buildings across the river in West Sacramento where land is more abundant and less expensive. Taxpayers would save billions of dollars and light rail could be justifiably built that much sooner.

Come to think of it, destroying those apartments reminds one of (the effort of) expanding the Port of Sacramento and the resultant destruction of nearby homes there, although more slowly.

WILLIAM A. LOWELL
West Sacramento

P.S.: Since Capitol Towers' Apartments were built prior to 1978, might they by paying the pre-Prop. 13 property tax rates? Replacement housing — if ever built — would be taxed at the higher post-Prop. 13 rates. This could explain the lack of local opposition to tearing down Capitol Towers' Apartments, but again, where's the money for replacement housing coming from?

The Sacramento River registered 1 ft. 6 in. U. S. Gauge at the S. P. bridge yesterday. This reading was taken at low tide and is not a real indication of the depth of the river for even at this writing River Steamers having a draft of more than 3 ft make daily trips up and down the stream without difficulty. Some very ugly sand bars stick their heads above the river bed north of the S. P. Bridge. The principal one being that one lately erected by the Federal Government in the middle of the stream to permit the passage of steamers near the old pioneer mill building.

The Washington Service Station is now selling gasoline at 16c a gallon to comply with the cut made yesterday at the principal stations in Sacramento and to comply with the announcement of the big producing corporations that gas is entitled to a lower rate to the consumer and may be still further cut, in response to the rule of supply and demand.

Wallie Fraser part owner in the Washington filling-station had the misfortune to lose his new Ford automobile last Saturday night August 18th at a point near 29th and C where he and several young friends of his had gone on a bathing and petting expedition. Following the bathing episode the young folks enjoyed what they called a chummy get together in the glades along the river and it was while this party was on that miscreants stole the new Ford from its parking place. On reporting at the police station Fraser found his automobile parked at the municipal garage stripped of several accessories which had been added to its equipment at great expense to the owner.

Bert Crane was a visitor at the Leinberger home from Turlock last Saturday. On Saturday evening he went to S. F. to spend a few days at the bay city on business.

Last Tuesday prohibition enforcement officers Greer and Plant made a flying visit to the establishment of Joe Beltrami and after searching around the place for a long time they decided that Beltrami was operating absolutely in a legitimate way without even a single ounce of intoxiating liquor. Beltrami has been conducting a boarding house and rooming house on the premises formerly known as the Weed Saloon but lately decided that it would pay him better to overlook the profits that he might make in Jackass.

Mrs. Joe Beltrami returned from Richardson Springs last Tuesday after spending several weeks at the mountain resort to cure rhuemetism.

Mrs Martin Marty of the monument ranch who has been seriously sick in the sisters hospital for several weeks is somewhat improved and has returned to her home but is still under the care of physicians.

Antone Marty and family are in the mountains outside of Red Bluff with relatives enjoying a few weeks vacation which has been well merited after a year of strenous effort.

A marriage license was taken out last Thursday in Sacramento for the wedding of Doris Norton and Merval Lewis of Sacramento. The young folks stole a march on their friends keeping their wedding a secret from many who wish them well. Doris has been a favorite and amiable young lady of Washington for many years and her wedding will be greeted by many friends as a prelude of many happy days.

Miss Evelyn O'Farrel of Sacramento spent the week-end at the home of her uncle, H. C. Bell.

Albert Miller of Fresno spent the week with his mother, Mrs. L. A. Drabiney.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Thomas, George Thomas and Miss Ruth Thomas were recent visitors in Vallejo.

Elmer Moffatt has returned to his home from the White Hospital, where he underwent an operation for appendicitis.

Mrs. Harry Steuben and son returned from a two weeks' visit with relatives in Oakland.

Vernon Porter of Los Angeles is visiting friends in Washington.

Paul Smith, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, at the Sisters Hospital, is able to be about again.

C. T. Williams of West Sacramento reported to Constable H. B. Buckingham that during his absence on a vacation his house was entered and a radio outfit and some silverware were stolen. The discovery of the theft was made on Williams' return to his home last Monday.

OPERATION OF CHINESE GAMBLING DENS CONDEMNED BY WASHINGTON RESIDENTS

Signatures in the number of 115 have been attached to a petition to the district attorney of Yolo County, George T. Kern, asking that he take immediate steps to suppress gambling houses in Washington.

Last Tuesday evening, in company with Constable Buckingham, he invaded the alley formerly known as Reed's Alley, where it was found that a gambling place had been fitted up but was not in operation at the time that the raid was made.

One Chinaman was found at a gambling table with $1.10 before him, but at the time of the raid there was no other person at the table on which the money was found, nevertheless the Chinaman was placed under arrest and was held on $100 cash bail by Judge Barry.

The trial of Yong Key, arrested on August 20th by Constable Buckingham and Kern, will take place on next Wednesday, August 29th, and the trial of Ah Lum, taken by Constable Buckingham and Don Graff on August 21st, will take place on the same day.

Lum has been held by Judge Barry under $100 cash bail to appear on the date above specified.

There seems no doubt that the prediction made by this paper three weeks ago that the Chinese of Sacramento are about to invade Washington, is about to be fulfilled. Eight places of business have now been leased by Chinamen and some are already operating, apparently as stores or soft drinks places, but what goes on behind the screens and high partitions remains a mystery to Americans who are not of the oriental race.

The Hoffman saloon that has been used as a soft drink place for many years was being remodeled yesterday under the direction of Contractor R. M. Smith of Sacramento. A carpenter working on the premises, Lawrence Urban, told the writer that a promise had been made to the Chinaman, Ah Fred, that the place would be ready for occupancy next Saturday. In this place the familiar partitions known in Chinese stores are being erected and apparently a lease has been granted to Ah Fred by the Hauser family, who own the property.

The old bakery shop next to the post office that has been vacant for many years is also being remodeled at the request of Chinese, who claim they have leased the property from the Hauser family also.

The Davis property on Second street, occupied some time ago by the Porter family, is being remodeled, partitions being removed and new appliances being installed to fit it as a place for Chinese occupation.

Examination of the petition to the district attorney showed that only about one-third of those who strenuously oppose the Chinese are property owners in Washington.

From expressions of opinion heard on the streets it is apparent that a counter petition may be circulated and all the large property owners of the town might be ready to welcome an influx that might mean prosperity to the property owners of the town.

Washington has been dormant for a considerable time, or really since the Southern Pacific bridge was built with its overhead passageway. That really is the worst detriment that could ever have been inflicted on the people.

As a residence section it has not built up as it should, and as a business center it has not flourished as other suburbs of Sacramento have flourished.

The marked advance made by North Sacramento within the past two years is proof of this. This northern suburb, separated from the Capital city by many miles of travel and with difficult roadways, has built up materially, while Washington, closer to the post office in Sacramento than Twenty-eighth street is, has absolutely fallen asleep.

The Independent is not in favor of a Chinese invasion but it is amply evident that invasion may forestall an influx of business that will mean added prosperity for the property owners of the town a little later on.

The Independent does not favor gambling in any sense of the word, but so long as American men and boys fail to secure admission to the Chinese places of gambling or business there can be no damage to morals in the community.

Conceding that the Chinese are not of the most desirable class of people there remiins the fact that there are today many others of foreign nativity who are just as undesirable as a Chinese, who have been making their homes in the town and who pursue their vocation without interference on the part of the residents of Washington.

Attention might be called to the camp located at the end of the M street bridge on this side of the river.

Time and again this paper has cried out for retribution against this conglomeration of invaluable itinerants, but yet no aid has come to back up the Independent to abate this nuisance.

A thousand times this paper would rather see a number of Chinese quietly operating business property under substantial leases and good rents rather than the bunch who now inhabit the camping ground near the M street bridge.

And yet, while the Independent fought against this promiscuous invasion of invaluable citizens, nobody lent a word to help it along to prevent the desecration.

If the Chinese will strictly adhere to the rule they have established that no white man can enter their gambling places, then they are a more desirable class than those located now at Front and M streets, and they are a more desirable class than those who for years were the bane and the trouble of Reed's Alley.

BLUEBIRD INN RAIDED: TWO ARRESTS MADE BY SHERIFF

J. Adams and M. Grace were arrested at a Broderick dance hall last Saturday night in a raid conducted by Constable Henry Buckingham and deputy sheriffs employed by Sheriff J. W. Monroe, including Adolph Silberstein and C. Simpkins. Four bottles of wine and a similar amount of jackass were confiscated in the raid. Some thirty patrons were found in the place at the time the officers swooped down on the place. Both men are in the county jail here, being held on violations of the Volstead act.

Some people enjoy the theatre chorus.

Our neighbors take most enjoyment in the Anvil Chorus.

FRST MENDICANT MAKES APEARANCE ON WASHINGTON STREETS

Frank Jones, a cripple with both legs cut off below his knees, was seen yesterday on the streets of Washington selling pencils to the charitably inclined.

His stock in trade was one pencil and many who saw his predicament dropped their dime into his hand and permitted him to retain his stock.

Frank Jones was not his name, but it will do for this occasion.

Disabled in a railroad accident 13 years ago and unable to walk except on his knees, he has managed to make a living and keep body and soul together by selling pencils, but a few days ago he was driven out of Sacramento by the police because the reformers want to clean up the town for the state fair.

God knows he needs help. He can't work, for navigation to him is painful. Heavy pads protect his knees from the pavements and a pair of crutches enable him to get along as best he can.

Unless the charitably inclined want to help him he must starve, and when driven out of a large community like Sacramento to get a few dimes from the working people of Washington, it would appear that he has struck the wrong quarter of the globe to make a living.

Jones made claim that he had applied at the office of the community chest in Sacramento and got little satisfaction. From the Salvation Army he claimed to have secured some aid but only for a few days.

Derelict, penniless and friendless, he walked on his knees across the bridge from Sacramento by orders of the police force and tried to sell one pencil so that he might eat before getting a bed.

fore their return next week. They will make their home in Sacramento where the groom is employed by the Capital Candy Company.

Fire of unknown origin damaged the roof of the old Lynch house on the levee near the Washington Water Works. The Washington Fire Department, recently reorganized, answered the call. The house is occupied by J. Josslyn and family.

F. L. White, Jr., has gone to Lake County on a deer hunt, while Mrs. White is at Wheatland visiting her mother, Mrs. H. Jasper.

Mrs. Sarah Evans has moved into one of the Reinersman flats.

Frank Todhunter of Knights Landing was in Washington on business last Saturday.

Mrs. Bernie Robbins and Mrs. J. N. Bennett have returned from a trip to Stockton.

GAS SUPPLY WILL BE SOON READY FOR WASHINGTON

Announcement is made by the P. G. and E. Company that a gas supply will be ready for consumers in the town within the next two months and that work will be commenced on the installation of the main pipe to convey the supply within the next ten days.

This decision was arrived at after a new canvas was made within the last few weeks when one hundred and thirty eight consumers pledged themselves to take a supply of gas for at least one year.

In all there are 245 possible consumers of manufactured gas for household purposes in the community and the corporation believes that when the first have taken the supply others will immediately fall in line because of the great convenience this household utility will be to consumers.

Immediately after the work of installation of the main lead pipe will be started an engineer will interview those householders who have signed to take a supply. He will locate the point at which the meter for each house is to be placed and after telling the householder where that meter will be placed the householder will be expected to extend a feed pipe from the stove or lighting apparatus to the meter.

From the meter to the main supply pipe the company will install 50 feet of pipe free of charge but should some more pipe be required to supply a home in reaching the meter a nominal charge for the distance over 50 feet will be made.

This is the third campaign that finally resulted in victory for the progressive householders who want a gas supply. Two previous campaigns were unsuccessful although there are a number of householders who must have the supply and who need it badly especially during the summer months.

A display of gas ranges is now being made at the headquarters of the corporation at 11th and K St and a still larger display will be made at the State Fair Grounds during the state fair.

Some parents are now naming their children Calvin, and some Warren Gamaliel.

The wise ones are calling their children Noah.

NO HUNTING

This is to notify the public that the California Fish and Game Commission has liberated herds of elk on our cattle range in Yolo, Lake and Colusa counties. This range commences approximately four miles west of Rumsey, near and including the Ray House range, extending up and including Cache Creek six miles, thence in a northeasterly direction crossing Bear Creek approximately eight miles above the junction of Cache and Bear creeks and bounded on the east by Cortina Mountains and including that part of the range formerly owned by the Stovall Wilcoxson Company called the "Hamilton Place," which is the northern boundary.

Anyone found hunting on these premises will be prosecuted according to law.

Bridge to be done within three years

■ New bridge is needed for future traffic flow as Southport builds out to 30,000 residents

By Steve Marschke

The long-awaited new bridge connecting the northern and southern halves of West Sacramento across the Port of Sacramento's barge canal will be complete within three years, City Manager Joe Goeden believes.

"About ten months are left for final design work," he said. "Then it will take about 18 months to construct."

The new bridge, planned for an area close to city hall on Stone Blvd., would supplement the two-lane crossing at Jefferson. City planners say it will be necessary for the new bridge to be complete before any major new development in Southport -- the city's southern half -- occurs.

About 90 percent of West Sacramento's current population lives in the city's northern half, and the 7,000 acres of Southport are regarded as prime developable property.

Goeden said the new bridge will consist of four lanes and be expandable to six.

"It's going to be a high-rise (in order to permit boat traffic underneath), even though we got approval not to do that," he commented. "It will go over the railroad tracks near Stone."

The bridge will be funded largely by a federal grant of over $8 million, which is intended to cover 80 percent of its costs. The city will pay the balance of construction costs through developer fees such as a traffic impact fee and a Mello-Roos tax district.

"The federal money has already started flowing," he added, saying the city has been reimbursed for several hundred thousand dollars in bridge design costs.

That was important, said Goeden, because some of the other projects nationwide which were intended to receive funding through the same piece of federal legislation may be trimmed back.

By beginning work on the bridge, West Sacramento has assured that won't happen to the Southport bridge.

Scholarship growing

The Mary Virginia Wells Memorial Scholarship Fund has been established at Wells Fargo Bank to honor the memory of Mary Wells, a long-time West Sacramento resident and teacher who died this past year. Ms. Wells had a life-long attraction for the printed word and the scholarship will be awarded on an annual basis to a graduating senior at River City High School who exhibits an interest in creative writing. The student will be selected by a panel of four River City English teachers and the scholarship will be awarded at the annual senior awards banquet. To date, $1276.00 has been generously donated, guaranteeing five years of scholarships. The goal is to double that amount, which would make it possible to fund the scholarhip for a full decade. Anyone wishing to donate to the scholarhsip or assist in the fundraising can do so by contacting Daryl Fisher at 372-6174 or Cora Hocker at 371-0700.

doubled its sewage discharge enforcement efforts after being taken to task by state officials, according to a city manager's office representative. After fining and threatening to discipline a number of local commercial dischargers, the businesses banded together to seek a change in city policy.

"Enforcement has occurred somewhat as a reaction to a state fine levied on the city," said Larry von Kaenel, a city spokesman. "It might have been a little reactive. Perhaps it was a little 'knee-jerk.' "

Two businesspeople explained the problem to the News-Ledger, but asked not to be identified in order not to jeopardize the new talks.

They said that a sudden, across-the-board crackdown on sewage dischargers has left some businesses in danger of having to shut down in the face of unreasonable restrictions on their discharges. Some have been fined substantial amounts of money -- with no warning -- because of relatively minor violations.

One local business representative, Don Deary of NorCal Beverage Company on Stone Blvd., said that the new talks between the city and business representatives have given room for hope.

"We seem to have a working relationship with (city manager) Joe Goeden," said Deary. "He has come to our meetings and been very open with us, so far."

Von Kaenel, a representative of Goeden, said that his office was "very willing to work with the business community towards what is a mutual problem."

He added that new sewage standards under consideration for the city's business dischargers may be revised in order to be more "practical." Those standards are now being reviewed by the state regional water quality control board.

Meanwhile, state officials sent another notice of violation to West Sacramento last week, faulting its sewage treatment operations. The letter generally upheld allegations made earlier by some of the department's employees and by federal and state investigators. It said that some of the city's workers had knowingly distorted test results when checking their own sewage quality control into the river.

Those charges have been denied by city management.

JENNIFER

body she met here liked her," said Zachary.

Despite the fact that dangerous drugs were used in Jennifer's West Sacramento home, Zachary was surprised drugs were involved in Jennifer's death.

"Jennifer really loved her mother, but hated the fact that her mother used drugs," she said.

Jennifer's mother, who lives in a West Sacramento apartment complex, could not be located for comment in this article.

About two years ago Jennifer was involved in West Sacramento Parks and Community Services' delinquency prevention program because she was not attending school, but she was not known to be using drugs at the time. Delinquency and Drug prevention official Steve Palmer remembers her as a very popular girl with a "bubbly" personality. When she did not enroll in school in West Sacramento in the fall, she was not missed because officials believed she was living with her aunt and attending school in Oakley.
